Celebrating MLK Celebrating, Celebrating Us

When God Uses Ordinary Men to Achieve the Extraordinary

PAYING TRIBUTE TO ALBERT JOYNER

EXCERPT

As I settled back in my chair and prepared for business as usual, at the Annual MLK Breakfast. I was keenly aware of all that was going on around me; simultaneously I was being transported in and out of the room by my own thoughts, thoughts of what Donna Brazile, this year's MLK Keynote Speaker was saying., thoughts of the traditional "breakfast" and most poignantly were my thoughts of how 1200 people come together each year on common ground to celebrate the work and achievements of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The tide is high, the music is on the one, and all seems right with the world. Then just like someone calling my name

I heard a familiar reference to a story I had recalled many times, I heard Commissioner, David Gnatt say, "I would like to share a short story about with you, a story about a man from McDowell County... I came forward in my seat, all my senses acutely intact, I became fixated on the speaker, literally holding my breath in anticipation of the next sentence. What story about McDowell could be relevant or worthy of noting at such an occasion? As I listened intently, Commissioner Gnatt began to speak about a man who was just an ordinary man, a man who had a passion for civil rights; when carrying the torch for civil rights "wasn't cool". The man's name was Albert Joyner Sr.! Now I was totally immersed in the moment and intently hanging on the speaker's every word. As he continued he told of how long before "Brown vs. the Board of Education", there came a man who was standing and advocating for integration in a little town named Old Fort! To quote a dear and admired friend here, my only thought was "do" !
